

The Queen's Nayland Visit

The Queen during her visit to Nayland Hall, the first institution of its kind established by the British Legion to the care and restoration of women in the Forces suffering from tuberculosis—inspected a guard of honour consisting of patients. She is seen above with the President (Gen. Sir Frederick Maurice), and (right) greeted by veterans of the last war, and prominent officials of the British Legion.

Press Cutting: The Queen's visit to Nayland, 23 March 1935. Her Majesty visited the British Legion's TB Sanatorium for Service Women at Wissington